A woman's lyrical touch is incredibly powerful. Female emcee, Miki Vale, has the power to deliver a smooth, raw vulnerability in the form of strength that is incredibly rare. Fit for any time and place, from coffee shop to dance session to blasting windows-down driving along the coast, Miki Vale is honest and empowering in every groove. Though much of her music comes from personal experience providing a small window for us to look into her life, the empowering nature of her content is what unifies her listeners to her and her music. I found a video for her song "Black" with Kandi Cole, and it is definitely a true fist pumper, so pump ya fists up.

This is Hip Hop
