Tender but tough: Australia's Tydi asks 'I Thought I Was Enough'

BY ANDRY BOSK x JULY 7, 2022

Australian award-winning ace Tyson Illingworth brings his chart-topping, Global Soundsystem game to meet Be Yourself benchmarks with pop-ready firepower. After Caitlin Allan sets the ball rolling with sensitive, high-reaching vocals doubling as a diary confessional, TyDi rocks foundations with a fierce electro-bass roller, giving this collaboration a spiky edge over its competition.

TyDi's considerable discography is matched by his achievements both academic (as a graduate of Queensland's high-status Conservatorium of Music) and sonic (#1 dance chart spots across the globe, column inches in the LA Times and as one of DJ Magazine's top 100 DJs).

As a main attraction at festivals all over the world, Illingworth nails the complete package category by showing the benefit of branching out and never standing still, composing for a broad range of high profile brands including Disney, Stella Artois and Swarovski.

'I Thought I Was Enough' is all about timing, easygoing melodies leaning on acoustic guitars and strings and naturally knowing how to reach out emotionally with Allan at her peak. Then TyDi lets the bulging bass notes go, making this highly charged house music in more ways than one. You've guessed it, just one listen will never be enough.
